Get to know the Orange-bellied Parrot

- One of the world's rarest birds – there are less than 100 remaining in the wild.
- With the help of conservation management, their numbers in the wild have tripled in the last five years.
- Each year, they fly all the way to Tasmania to breed and fly back to spend winter in coastal Victoria and South Australia.
- They are not much bigger than a Budgerigar.

Your visit helps us save local threatened species from extinction.

THEY'RE CALLING ON YOU

You can help gorillas in the wild by recycling your old mobile phones.
